

INVITATION
Monday 3 February, 2014 at 7.30 pm

The War Archive is delighted and honored to invite you in a presentation by

MANOLIS KASIMATIS

on the topic of

FILMING AND PHOTOGRAPHING THE DECEMBER 1944 EVENTS

The presentation will, for the first time catalogue and evaluate the photographers of these important events and will also make use of the photo and film coverage surrounding the Battle of Athens in December 1944, mostly shot by the film and photo units of the British Army. Use is made not only of the actual films, but also of image sequences from films as well as of photos in order to present in a unified and coherent manner the visual record of these monumental events of the modern Greek history.

Manolis Kasimatis

Was born in Athens in 1958 and received his first lessons in photography from his father, a veteran photoreporter of the newspaper "Avgi"

He attended various courses in photography as well as in photo design, graphic design, videoing and photo and video editing.

His photos have been exhibited and won prizes in various exhibitions in Greece and abroad. He has been very active in various institutions and organizations in Greece promoting photography, photo design and photo reporting. He has been the editor and contributor in numerous publications and magazines on photography and his work has been published in magazines and books as well as in publications that he himself and designed and published.

The Arheion is looking very much forward to your presence in this event.
