28th October: Is it truly a nationla day ?

Greece celebrates two nationla days: 25th March, the start of the war of liberation from the Ottoman empire and the establishment of the modern Greek nation-state, and 28th October the start of the Greek-Italian war and the of WWII and Occupation for Greece,

As the 28th October events are realatively recent, they offer an interesting discourse as what make that day a national day, apart from the heroic defence of Greece from its invader, and whether its establishment united or divided the Greek people.The presentation will be in Greek.

The presented, Nikos Mitrogiannopoulos, has been in charge of presentations in the Archive since its inception in 2012. He is a graduate of the Athens University in Philology and also a graduate in cinema studies.He is a teacher, author, broadcaster and producer of short films and, resently, a postgraduate student at Athens Univesty, Dpeartment of Public History.
