

The Archive of History and Art-The War Archive, invites you to a presentation by Raymond Alvanos on

The 1940s decade and the post-civil war struggle over memory

The topic is based on Prof.Alvanos' research and publications as well as his experience with his association with the Park of National Reconciliation in Mount Grammos, site of the most bitter fighting of the Greek Civil War.He will explore the way that the collective memory was formed, manipulated and interpreted thus helping to form the image and culture of the society we all live.

Prof.Alvanos studied in EKPA and did his graduate studies at Essex University in UK.He taught at the University of Western Macedonia and in the town of Kastoria.He is currently teaching in, among others institutions, at EAP and the Open University of Cyprus.The presentation will be in Greek and live at the War Archive.It will not be transmitted by any digital platform.
