

The Archive of History and Art-The War Archive is very proud and honoured to present

Professor Christos Doumas on Saturday 16 December 2023 at 19.30 sharing with us his extraordinary life and achievements, and especially in Akrotiri, Thera (Santorini) :

“The Aegean Sea, the Uniting Divide”

The presentation will be live, in Greek, at the Arheion, Mythymnis 36, Plateia Amerikis, Athens 112 52

Professor Doumas needs little or no introduction as his archaeological work, and that in Akrotiri, Thera, has established him as one of the best-known and honoured archaeologists in Greece and, indeed, in the world. But perhaps even more importantly his personality and demeanour make him a truly special person to meet. The Arheion is very proud and privileged to give the opportunity to its friends to meet and hear first-hand a person who has stamped with his work the discovery and interpretation of a hugely important part of the history of Cycladic Greece.

My wife Anabella and myself (I first met Prof.Doumas in 1967 when we were both studying at different institutions at London University) are looking forward to meet you at the Arheion.

The text of the presentation will be available in Greek and English at the site of Arheion www.wararchivegr.org at the section News and Developments

IMPORTANT NOTICE:

Please note that the space of the Arheion is quite limited.It is therefore most important to send us as soon as possible your participation by email to the address below (not by phone please) including your name, your email and mobile telephone number. By necessity this will be an invitation on the basis of “first come-first served” given also the willingness of professor Doumas to do his presentation live. All participations will be personally acknowledged.
