

Archive invites you to a presentation by Sotiris Vourliotis on Saturday 20 January at 19.30, via Zoom

Berlin in the darkest period of its history 1933-1945

Sotiris Vourliotis studied engineering at the Athens Polytechnic and has been interested in several aspects of the WWII on which topic he has written two books and numerous articles.

His presentation examines the history of Berlin from the rise of the Nazis to power till its occupation by the Allies, a period of triumph and of exaggerated expectations from its being capital of the Germanic Empire till its virtual destruction by bombing and street fighting. He will be illustrating his talk by photographic material.
